The opportunity is before the rural districts to lift a large part of the world to new life, and to give new energy to that part of the world which la left. Above all, In the greater persistence of rural family life, the greater stability of the marriage tie, the consequently larger family, the rural community forms a surer foundation for the future than the city. The rural community can stimulate its own boys and girls to higher ideals and larger views of the world, and by arousing Itself to its own mission, the community cannot fail, in large measure, to recover its own lost grip on the wider world. To do its legitimate work the school must be manned with teachers who feel a divine call to service. That, in turn calls for a school board with imagination and vision. The rural school Is in poor condition to render much service, while the service demanded is great. The task of the teacher is to open new visions, to arouse deeper energies in the pupils, and through them to lift the ideals of the community. and to make the people hear the call of the times. The boys and girls must be taught to realize the value of more and better training, or kept In school long enough to find themselves. The rural community has never made a just estimate of...
